

STRANGE STORY OF FLOOD AND DEATH.

NARROW ESCAPE OF MISS MARY KUFER—HER COMPANIONS DROWNED.

Miss Mary Kuffer, of No. 28 Charlotte-st., Jersey City, yesterday called at the Morgen to see the body of Mrs. Margaret Lee, who was found drowned in the Hackensack River on Tuesday. She told Keiper Heck a singular story, part of which was verified later in the day. She said that on Monday night she and Mrs. Lee and a man named Oscar Feigel started from her house to visit a friend of Mrs. Lee named Grant. They had to cross the railroad bridge over Van Horn Creek, which empties into the Hackensack. The tide was high and the bridge was partly under water. She went in advance of her friends, and when in the middle of the bridge saw an engine coming. She shrieked and then jumped into the water. She caught hold of one of the piles and kept on swimming until rescued by a brakeman. She thought it singular that none of the railroad men mentioned her friends, and concluded that they had turned back and gone home.

After drying her clothes at the flagman's shanty she went home also. She did not hear of Mrs. Lee's death until Thursday night, and she thought that if she was drowned Feigel must have been drowned also. This surmise proved true, for Feigel's body was found in the river near Snake Hill at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.
